Fernandel, 2012. Book Condition: new. Ravenna, 2012; br., pp. 253, cm 14x20. Bella, giovane, apparentemente sicura di sé e ben attenta a valorizzare il proprio corpo, Iris spende denaro - che spesso non ha - in vestiti di qualunque marca e prezzo, in stivali cinte e borsette, ma anche in gadget della Roma per il fidanzato e soprammobili per la casa in cui vive con i genitori. Iris acquista qualsiasi oggetto le possa restituire un'immagine migliore di sé, farla sentire qualcuno, assicurarla e gratificarla. La madre le ha insegnato che la bellezza è una dote che non bisogna sprecare, e che anzi deve essere messa a frutto per farsi strada nella vita. Così per ripianare i debiti e continuare a pagare quello che compra, Iris non trova che una soluzione: prendere l'insegnamento della madre alla lettera, facendo del proprio corpo uno strumento di scambio. In fondo, le sembra giusto valorizzare il dono che la natura le ha fatto. Ma questa spirale di acquisti, debiti e appuntamenti la trascina sempre più verso gli abissi di un mondo ingovernabile. Finché l'incontro con un uomo che sembra sinceramente interessato a lei le fa sperare di poter davvero cambiare vita, di poter anteporre i sentimenti all'interesse economico. Un uomo ricco e generoso, ma molto, forse troppo simile a lei.
