Excerpt: . . . and Efficiency in the preparation of its outlines of the organization of the United States Government. 1 They differ from those outlines, however, in that whereas the commissions report showed only organization units, the presentation herein has been carried far enough to show the personnel embraced in each organization unit. These outlines are of value not merely as an effective means of making known the organization of the several services. If kept revised to date by the services, they constitute exceedingly important tools of administration. They permit the directing personnel to see at a glance the organization and personnel at their disposition. They establish definitely the line of administrative authority and enable each employee to know his place in the system. They furnish the essential basis for making plans for determining costs by organization division and subdivision. They afford the data for a consideration of the problem of classifying and standardizing personnel and compensation. Collectively, they make it possible to determine the number and location of organization divisions of any particular kind, as for example, laboratories, 1 House Doc. 458, 62A Congress, 2nd Session, 1912--2 vols. libraries, blue-print rooms, or any other kind of plant possessed by the National Government, to what services they are attached and where they are located, or to determine what services are maintaining stations at any city or point in the United States. The Institute hopes that upon the completion of the present series, it will be able to...
