Not illustrated. 1876 Excerpt: .We may also speak of a thing as possessing the same quality as two or more other things, but in a greater degree than any one of them. For instance, one cat may be white, another whiter, and another whiter still, or the whitest. The form of the adjective which we use to express this kind of comparison is called the Superlative Degree. If we say, This apple is sweeter than all the rest, although all the rest may include a greater number of apples, yet there are only two things compared in the mind: this apple, and all the rest. I can express the same relation by saying, This apple is the sweetest. In this case I consider this apple as one of a group, and compare it with each. The Superlative Degree is that form of the adjective which we use when we express a...
