Excerpt: . . . that a great dinner was to be given at the City Hotel, and that he, MDowell, was to be a waiter there. And it was then agreed between MDowell, Farrel, and himself, that they should steal whatever they could. --Kelly put on MDowells surtout coat, his own being very shabby, and they went to the hotel. There Kelly assisted the waiters, and stole two bundles, which MDowell and he took to Farrels house. That about dusk Mr. Black arrived, and he saw the trunk placed in No. 13. At this time MDowell and Farrel were at home, whither Kelly went, and told them of the trunk. Then all three went back to the hotel, and Kelly went up stairs, brought the trunk down, and in the passage, near the front door, delivered it to Farrel. Farrel afterwards told him that there were watches...
