To us the parable simply brings home the whole teaching of this day: Whatever the outward circumstances of your life, devote yourselves to God. However little or much the stewardship of wealth intrusted to you by the world, make the best use of it for your eternal life. If Christ be your Master, follow His example. Pray for the spirit to think and do always such things as be rightful. V. We must not leave out of notice the First Evening Lesson. We behold Elijah sitting despondent under a juniper-tree in the wilderness, requesting for himself that he may die. What! had he, too, lost for a time the spirit to think and do what is right? Was he, too, halting...
